XClinical invited to speak at two CDISC user group meetings in 2008

XClinical executives will be presenting at two important CDISC European User Group Meetings in January 2008.

XClinical GmbH, Munich, Germany – Dec. 17, 2007 – XClinical, a European vendor of innovative software products for e-clinical trials, today announced the invitation to two important industry events, the CDISC User Group Meetings in January 2008.

XClinical executives will discuss key issues regarding CDISC ODM (Operational Data Model) in clinical trials in presentations at two CDISC European User Group Meetings, to be held on January 21, 2008, in Paris, France, and in Copenhagen, Denmark. The presentations will focus on the benefits and use of CDISC data standards. CEO and Co-founder, Dr. Philippe Verplancke, who is a well-known ODM expert, will give an introduction regarding all aspects of ODM in clinical studies and the benefits of using ODM in managing the whole clinical trial process. Another XClinical executive team member will introduce CDISC ODM at the CDISC Nordic User Group Meeting which takes place in Copenhagen, Denmark, at the same date.

Dr. Verplancke has already spoken at the CDISC European Italian-Speaking User Group Meeting on November 16, 2007, in Milan, Italy. The objective of these user group meetings is to provide an effective exchange platform for users and potential users of the CDISC standards which are getting more and more important for the urgently needed standardization in clinical research.

XClinical is an active member of the CDISC organization (CDISC = Clinical Data Interchange Standards Consortium), and a CDISC ODM certified vendor of an innovative web-based platform that allows performing clinical trials electronically. XClinical's software solutions are based on the CDISC data standards and cover the clinical data life cycle from end to end.
